A grand object for the Enterprising,

WHEREIN a partner is wanted, to improve & occupy one of the most eligible and advantageous Mill-seats in the Western world It is situated in the Illinois Territory, within six miles of Vincennes, on the great road leading to St. Louis and Kaskaskia, on the river Amberas, which is a stream sufficiently large to afford water to carry on any works that may be thought necessary, at all times—One of the banks of the stream is a permanent rock, rather of the saponaceous kind impervious to water and easily cut or fashioned, as may be required—the bottom of the stream, opposite the mill is all sheeted with the same. The seat lies within one and a half miles of the Wabash river, enjoys all the advantages of the navigation of the same—the circumjacent country is equal to any section in the western country for agriculture, and especially for that staple commodity, WHEAT, as its situation is high and undulating, and of course healthy—the soil of a black loam mixed with sand—the face of the country interspersed with praries of the most agreeable texture, and in fertility second to none, and for the most part surrounded by luxuriant wood-lands, and as we may say it is yet almost in a state of nature, and affords a most advantageous range for cattle, hogs, etc. A number of families have lately settled in the vicinity, and shortly we look for a flourishing settlement there. Nature has been exuberant at the seat, as there is scarce any advantage that the enterprising partizan might almost wish or expect that is not to be found there. Take into view the manufacturing of flower largely for foreign markets—a complete seat for a boat and ship yard, also, for a brewery, distillery, and tanyard. and a well equiped tavern is much wanted at present to accommodate the road, and for which it is an excellent stand—there are many other advantages that will appear by taking a view of the premises. There is an excellent saw-mill now going, on the spot.

My primary object is to have erected and equiped a merchant mill with not less than three pair of stones. I will furnish the seat upon equiable terms.

It is hoped none will offer that are not of good standing in society, men of enterprize, and possessed of such funds as will enable them to carry on largely. A trio partnership would be preferred, as there is a great field for enterprize.

I also wish to sell the plantation I now live on, it contains 400 acres, 80 of which is under high cultivation, the fertility of which is second to none, has on it an excellent never failing spring, well calculated for a brewery or distillery as it has a great fall, situated within 3 miles of Vincennes, the subscriber who lives on the premises would think himself honored by any gentleman's calling who might have an eye to either of the objects & would take pleasure in shewing the same.

Awful Calamity.

We are indebted to a valuable friend in the borough of York for the following statement of the recent distress: Lancaster Jour.

MR. HAMILTON,

It is with the most painful sensations I attempt to give you a hasty narrative of the most awful calamity that ever visited the inhabitants of Yorktown, and especially those who resided and had their property on and near Codorus creek.

On Saturday between two and three o'clock in the morning, it began to rain, and continued to pour down in torrents until about one o'clock in the afternoon.—Such a tremendous gush of water never was witnessed before by the oldest persons. It produced such an accumulation of water, that the Codorus rose about three feet in less than an hour. As soon as the arches of the stone bridge on High-street were choaked, the water swelled on each side of the creek: considerably beyond Water-street, which is east of the Codorus, and as far west as Newbury-street. The violence of the torrent carried all before it, and presented to the human eye the most awful spectacle. Houses, with their inhabitants, were tumbling into the mighty current of this dreadful element; ruin and devastation were spreading around. The lamentation, the piercing shrieks, the sad groans, the weeping eyes of all sexes, were more than could be endured by the stoutest heart. The countenance of every individual was covered with a solemn gloom, and an awful anxiety pervaded every breast, in viewing death and destruction. Many of those who fled to their houses and hoped there for preservation, now exist in eternity. Mr. Hugh Cunningham, Mrs. Cunningham, Miss Colvin, Samuel Eichelberger, son of Mr. Martin Eichelberger, and Daniel Updegraff, sunk together in the same house into a watery grave; others were drowned by the immersion of buildings and in endeavouring to effect their escape. Houses partly in an entire state, with people in them, and roofs with persons on them, were floating down the stream. Some had their lives rescued from their perilous situation by Mr. Penrose Robinson,* (whose activity and enterprize is highly praise-worthy.) Some were taken alive out of houses which had lodged after the subsidence of the freshet. It was altogether the most horrible scene conceivable. I saw substantial brick houses, frame and other buildings yield to the irresistible force of the flood, and sink beneath its surface. The dreadful crash of houses and other property, was heard every where, with the cries of "help," from individuals who stood on the roofs of buildings, while the water was washing away the foundations, and threatening every moment to ingulph them; but no boat could approach them. They had to be left to their fate. Upwards of forty dwelling houses, tan houses, breweries and mechanic shops were swept away, and about thirty more, as far as it is ascertained, were materially damaged, and can not well be repaired. Mr. Jessop's cotton factory is much injured; Mr. Frederick's mill-dam, and Mr. T. B. Coleman's forge-dam (at Spring Forge) are entirely destroyed, and the forge is much damaged. At Mr. P. J. King's paper mill the tenant's house, and Mr. G. Louch's dwelling house at his mill, & Mr. Weidner's forge, are entirely carried away. Messrs. Doudle's, Martin Eichelberger's G. Lauman's, J. Smyser's tanyards, with the currying shops, bark mills and other improvements, are partly washed away; Mr. Welsh's and Mr. John Barnitz's breweries are totally destroyed.—Messrs. Doudle, Eichelberger, Lauman, Smyser, and Welsh were probably the principal sufferers. Many who were worth from four to ten thousand dollars, have lost their all. The terrific stream was literally covered with furniture and property of every description. The stone bridge on High-street was immersed and nothing but the piers and arches are now to be seen; the wooden bridge on George street is entirely carried off; the bridges along the whole stream are either swept away or materially damaged. The loss of property on Codorus can not be less than two hundred thousand dollars, and perhaps (if it could be ascertained) that in the county on a fair estimate, would exceed half a million. The streets near the scene of this dreadful misfortune are covered with ruins. This was a terrible visitation of Providence, and will be to many unfortunate persons irretrievable in its consequences.

This flood is said to have risen from four to six fet higher than the memorable flood of '86. This imperfect sketch, rely on it, is by no means exaggerated, but in truth comes short of a full picture of the distress.

Yours, very respectfully,

[We hear also that William Barber, Esq. made uncommon exertions and risked his life to assist the unfortunate sufferers.]

From the Baltimore Telegraph, Aug. 10.

FRESHET.

On the night of Friday the 9th instant, the rain descended with unusual violence, and continued to increase until Saturday morning—between the hours of 9 and 12 o'clock of that day, the descending deluge seemed to pour from the clouds in torrents. Large sheets of water poured from the firmament upon us in such quantities, that the lower part of the city became completely immersed in water. In the mean time, the descending torrents through various channels were uniting all their streams, the rain continued to pour down with unabated vehemence. Market space was completely immersed.—Men and women were seen passing in boats from one market to another, for the purpose of saving what little property could be preserved from the deluge. At length, as far as the eye could stretch in various directions, we beheld whole streets swept by the descending streams, forming a spectacle equally sublime and terrific. Jones' falls so suddenly replenished from so many sources, swelled beyond its banks, bearing away every thing in triumph that opposed the rapidity of the current. Ponderous bridges were loosened from their foundations in an instant, and were seen swept along like skiffs upon the floating surface, Houses that for a few moments appeared to obstruct the progress of the stream, were suddenly undermined, and swept away, bearing nothing but a shapeless mass of bricks. We do not believe that we exceed the truth, when we assert that the water raised to the height of 16 feet above the usual level.

Every bridge over Jones' falls execpting Baltimore, Gay and Pratt-str' bridges, were demolished, and fragments of floating timber, broken furniture, & implements of industry, articles of merchandize, houses, horses, cows and other cattle, all swept away in confusion, proclaimed the extent of the injury committed. We were forcibly impressed at this moment, with the apparent nothingness and vanity of human strength, beholding this terific demolition with so much ease, of works, that required so much patient labor to erect—we looked—they seemed to stand firm and irrisistible at one moment—we looked again, and they were gone. Amid this warring of the elements, were to be seen the generous and benevolent, encountering every hazard, and braving every danger, for the preservation of the persons and property of their countrymen—sailing amidst the floating wrecks, and snatching the distressed and afflicted from what appeared to be instant and inevitable death; this was a spectacle, if possible, more sublime than that presented by the desolation itself. We cannot, at this early period, speak of the extent of the injury—this must be a matter of future calculation and enquiry: The ensuing morning rose brilliant and serene—we see nothing now of that destructive agent, and we can now only trace his route by his ravages. He has departed indeed like a dream; but he has left wrecks behind.—We presume that it is unnecessary to state to our fellow citizens, that a strong, imperious christian duty remains now to be performed.—To search out and to relieve the sufferers by this visitation of Divine Providence, we presume, will be no less a pleasure than a duty—poverty can only command a tear for the sufferings of others; it is the higher, more noble, more God-like privilege of opulence not only to sympathise over, but to relieve such distresses. Several lives have been lost, the number not yet ascertained, and upwards of a million of property destroyed.

The water company's mill dam has been swept away, and the canal partially filled up. Pennington's mill dam carried away, as also are most of the mill dams on Jones' Falls.

The rolling and slitting mill, as well as the bridge at Ellicot's upper mills, have also been carried away. The extent of the injury has not yet been ascertained.

But what will more immediately deserve the attention of the police, will be the great quantity of stagnant water deposited in private cellars. Such a nuisance in this hot season, unless speedily removed, may create pestilence, and do far more injury than the flood. We presume that no time will be lost in taking the most effective measures to guard against so serious an injury.

FATE OF AN AMERICAN GENTLEMAN.

Messrs. BOLLES & Co.---Since my return to America, from the Desert of Zaara, in Africa, which was on the 30th of May, 1817, at Boston, I have examined in vain, many public papers to find some mention of the melancholy death of an American gentleman, who was like myself, a slave to the Arabs. I learned his fate from JOHN BROWN, of New York, who was ransomed at Magadore, near the time I was, and who was passenger with me to Boston. He said he saw him die, in December, 1810, upon the Deserts, and buried him with his own hands. Brown did not know his name: but a few facts which I learned from him may lead to a discovery. Brown told me that this gentleman was a passenger in a vessel from Baltimore to Buenos Ayres, called the Romp—that he was commissioned for the army of the Patriots in South America—that he had been a major in the United States late army, and was said to be a relative of the late Vice President of the United States, and a citizen of the southern states. He left the Romp, and went aboard a Prize bound to Buenos Ayres; Smith, prize-master; who was drowned, as the vessel went a shore on the western coast of Africa, in about lat. 13 N. This gentleman was enslaved with Brown, and died as mentioned. This statement may be of service, as it may lead to a discovery of his name, and inform his suffering friends of his fate.

ARCHIBALD ROBBINS.

Honor among Theives.—Carun Khan, the late emperor of Persia, who died 1779 was raised to the Persic throne from a mean family, and from the rank of a common soldier. Though illiterate, he was famous for the justice and practical good sense of his administration. It is related in Malcolm's history of Persia, that his majesty used to rehearse to his company the following curious piece of self biography. "When I was a poor soldier," he often said, "in Nadir Shah's camp, my necessity led me to steal, from a saddler, a gold embossed saddle, which had been sent by an Asghan Chief, to be repaired. I soon afterwards learnt that the man, from whom it was taken, was in prison, and sentenced to be hung. My conscience smote me, and I replaced the saddle exactly on the place from which I took it. I waited till it was discovered to the saddler's wife, who, on seeing it, gave a scream of joy, fell down upon her knees, and prayed aloud, that the person who brought it back might live to have an hundred gold embossed saddles. I am quite certain, he added, smiling, that the honest prayer of the old woman has aided my fortune in the attainment of that splendor which she desired I should enjoy."

Medical Virtues of the Nettle.

It has long been my sentiment, that the most common gifts of Providence are the most useful, salutary and worthy of estimation. To prove that this opinion has not been ill founded, I will, at present, apply it to only one instance, of which I can speak with great confidence.

The common stinging nettle, apparently as useless and troublesome a plant as any that has been stigmatised with the name of weed, is one of the most efficacious medicines we have in the vegetable kingdom: in the form of a strong decoction, or infusion, taken in the quantity of a pint in a day, it is a most valuable strengthener of general or partial relaxation. In that of a weak decoction, or infusion, it proves an admirable alternative and deobstruent, in impurities of the blood, and in obstructions of the vessels. And in that of expressed juices, taken by spoonfulls, as the exigency of the case requires, it is the most powerful styptic in the internal bleedings known.—Externally applied, as a fomentation or poultice, it amazingly decreases inflammation, and resolves swellings. In the common sore throat, thus applied, and internally, as a gargle, great dependence may safely be put in this common plant. I have been witness to its great efficacy therein in many instances.

PITTSBURGH.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 22, 1817.

Contradiction.—We have given current to two articles which lately originated in the Evening Post—one about a beautiful lady having had her nose bitten off, by her husband--and the other, about this man having taken his own life. The facts are (says the N. York Gazette) that the lady had her nose bitten, but not off. The man lives, and is at large!

FOR THE GAZETTE.

At a numerous and respectable meeting, of the citizens of the city of Pittsburgh, friends to a free and candid expression of political sentiments, held, on the 16th inst. at the house of Dennis Flagherty, for the purpose of adopting such measures, as might in their opinion, promote the best interests of the state of Pennsylvania, Phelim M'Guigan esq. having been called to the chair, and Arthur O'Farrin appointed secretary—On motion, the following resolutions, were unanimously adopted. Preliminary resolutions.

1. Resolved--That every member of this meeting, who may be convicted of having drank more than one gill of spirituous liquor immediately preceding the organization or during the sitting of this meeting, shall be expelled.

2. Resolved—That Turlough Maccoril be appointed door-keeper, whose duty it shall be to prevent the entrance of any whom he may have reason to think do not profess true republican and patriotic principles.]

3. Resolved—That the situation of our state, requires the adoption of prompt and vigorous measures, on the part of all those who are friends to civil and political freedom, and desirous of maintaining the maxim, which constitutes the fundamental principle of true republicanism, that merit alone ought to entitle men to office.

4. Resolved--That the machinations of designing demagogues, who are aiming at power, by endeavoring to elevate to the highest executive offices, men who have avowedly professed themselves averse to the adoption of the patriotic motto "principles and not men," threaten to produce the most alarming consequences, and ought to be vigilantly guarded against, by every patriot.

5. Resolved—That, taking into consideration the several circumstances, which have attended throughout, the proceedings of the two political parties, that now exist in our state, it does appear obvious to the members of this meeting, that every exertion ought to be made to thwart their dangerous designs, by nominating to office, men, who, from their long and faithful services, in the great cause of Liberty and Equality, have given just grounds to expect, will support, in the capacity of executive and legislative officers, the true interests of their and our beloved country.

6. Resolved—That, in proceeding to such nomination, no regard ought to be paid to party feeling or prejudice; but that such men ought to be selected, as are possessed of talents to conduct the concerns of government, and of virtue sufficient to act impartially, and without regard to the clamours of faction.]

7. Resolved, Therefore—That the members composing this meeting, do unanimously recommend to their fellow-citizens, for support, at the ensuing general election, the following persons for the offices to which they are respectively nominated—to wit

FOR GOVERNOR, Robert Smith,
SENATOR, Jos. Willard,
ASSEMBLY, Caleb Mills, Henry Scofield, Patrick Dougherty, & Loudon H. Burton.
AUDITOR, James Denning, (alias Perryopolis.)

And be it further Resolved, that a committee, to consist of the following persons, be appointed to address their fellow-citizens, on the subject upon which this meeting was called to act, viz. Roger O'Rourke, Patrick O'Blarney, Neal Macfail, Phelim M'Guigan, and Arthur O'Farrin, Esqrs.

ADDRESS.

Fellow-citizens:—In compliance with the wishes of the persons who composed the late meeting, we shall endeavor to point out to you the advantages which would result from the adoption of their sentiments, in regard to the subject on which they assembled to deliberate. In expressing their sentiments, we do no more than exercise the right of every citizen of a free country; and we earnestly call upon you, to give a candid and impartial hearing to the arguments, which, in the capacity of the committee, of freemen, we shall advance in support of the good cause.

Long and sad experience, has proved the danger of the system which has been pursued in the state of Pennsylvania, with regard to the appointment of public servants—too much influence has been exerted by men, who aspiring to power, have paid little or no attention to the public interests; and the consequences which have resulted from the exercise of this influence, have sufficiently convinced every candid mind, that a further perseverance in it will produce the most direful effects.

We need not, fellow-citizens, enter into a minute or elaborate discussion, of the several acts which have been committed by men in power, for the last nine years.—You are already acquainted with their nature, and the effects, which they have produced. You have witnessed the prostitution of legal power, to the base and venal purposes of promoting private and party interests--You have experienced the ignominious consequences which flow from the perversion of the principles of republicanism; and you behold, at the present day, the vile intrigue, and scandalous proceedings, of those who are intrusted with the administration of your government. Need we say any thing further, to induce you to adopt measures, such as are recommended in the resolutions which you have just read? We trust, that the pure and unsophisticated principles, which ought to be the prominent characteristics of a free people, will prompt you to support, at the ensuing general election, the persons who have been nominated, as worthy of their fellow-citizens support.

The gentleman who is proposed as a candidate for the highest executive office in your gift, is well known to you, as a friend to the true interests of his country. His active exertions in support of manufactures, the great object of every independent community, and his strenuous efforts to promote the internal improvements of the state, by the construction of roads, bridges, canals, &c. sufficiently demonstrate his patriotism.

His talents are acknowledged by those with whom he has maintained a personal and epistolary intercourse, throughout this state, or the U. States; and his real regard for the interests of science and literature, will be best tested, by an examination of his conduct since his residence in the Western country—suffice it to observe, that he is now, and has for a length of time, been engaged in the honorable capacity of a preceptor of youth. His claims on the gratitude of his countrymen, although not supported by such pecuniary resources, as are possessed by Mr. Heister, or by the chicanery and intrigue, which are enlisted under the banners of Mr. Findlay, are not the less apparent to those who view impartially the merits of the real patriot, and who are willing to give to virtue its well-earned reward.

Such are the qualifications of Mr. Smith; and we fondly anticipate, that they will be duly appreciated at the approaching election,—that patriotism will not go unrewarded—that talents, will receive the meed of just applause---and that honesty and integrity, will be considered as primary ingredients, in the character of the man, who is held up to the view of his fellow-citizens, as a candidate for their suffrages.

Of the candidates for legislative offices, it will be unnecessary to say much; you are already acquainted with their characters.

Mr. Willard has long resided in Pittsburgh and its vicinity. His firm and manly adherence, to the genuine principles of re-publicanism is his best recommendation. His talents have been fully tested, & his integrity has never been called in question. We ask you, then, fellow-citizens, to give him your support, and to prove, that while you wish to maintain the principles of equality, with regard to civil rights & privileges, you are not willing to admit, that those principles, should be perverted to such a degree, as to elevate men to office, who are destitute of every requisite qualification, but those which are founded on impudence and false pretensions to patriotism.

Messrs. Mills, Scofield, Dougherty and Burton, the candidates for Assembly, are, doubtless too well known to you, to require any panegyric from us, you are the only judges of their merits; and in you is invested the right, of evincing your respect for their characters and conduct, by giving a public proof of your confidence in their talents and integrity.

Mr. Denning, who has been named as a fit person to exercise the functions of the important office of Auditor, is certainly eminently qualified to fulfill the arduous duties which are attached to that station, to the entire satisfaction of every genuine patriot. Need we say more? The eulogia of his fellow citizens may extend the knowledge of his character, but they can add but little to his real merits.

And now, fellow-citizens, having performed the duty which was assigned us, by pointing out to you the reasons, which ought to induce you to afford your support to those men, whom your fellow-labourers in the cause of truth and patriotism, have recommended to your support, it only remains for us, to enforce the arguments, that are contained in the foregoing resolutions, by calling upon you to examine with impartiality, the various methods which have been employed, for the purpose of elevating Mr. Findlay or Mr. Heister, to the gubernatorial chair. When the venal flattery that has been employed to raise them to power, on the ruins of republican principles, is compared with their real merit, you will be able to form a just estimate of their claims on your regard and support. We will only add, that the interest of our mutual country are staked upon the issue of the ensuing contest—that honesty and talents are opposed to intrigue and ignorance; and that the triumph of the just principles of government, will depend on the degree of support which you afford to those whom your fellow-citizens have recommended as worthy of the important trust, which is reposed in the representatives of a great and patriotic people.

LATEST FROM AMELIA ISLAND.

Capt. Dugan of the brig Comodore Decatur, arrived at New-York on the 9th inst. in five days from Amelia; informs, that about eleven o'clock the evening before he sailed, the royalists began to storm the place, and kept up an uninterupted fire with small arms and six pounders for several hours. The force of M'Gregor is said to consist only of about 200 men. The morning on which the firing ceased, the patriot flag was still flying, but the final result was not known. M'Gregor had a large armed brig and several schooners at Amelia, one of which had carried in a brig under French colors loaded with coffee on suspicion of its being Spanish property, and it was thought it would be condemned.

WINE PROSPECTS.—It is with much satisfaction we communicate to our distant readers, that the vineyards in this vicinity have never offered brighter prospects of rewarding the labors of the vine dressers, and the crops of corn are uncommonly promising. The Vineyards offer to the view such a profusion of fruit as to nourish the hope of a most exuberant vintage this fall. Reflecting on the advantages to society, & to individuals who engage in it, should this branch of agriculture become general on the banks and hillocks of the Ohio, we are astonished that the example set by the Swiss settlers in this neighborhood is not generally followed. The valley through which the Ohio runs is capable of producing as much wine as would suffice for the consumption of the whole of the United States. What a happy effect on the morals of society would be produced if wine could be substituted for the poisonous beverages which impair their health, besot, and destroy the morals of the American people? what immense numbers of families might, like those few sons of Helvetia who have planted the vine here, find "health and peace, and sweet content," on the shores of the great Ohio, if they would make it their business to cultivate the vine.

NEW NON INTERCOURSE ACT.

'More mud Ben.'

The members of the last legislature, in their zeal for the encouragement of seminaries, appropriated all fines assessed for breaches of penal laws to their support.—Among the penal items we find the following:

"Every married woman who shall have sexual intercourse with any other person than her husband, shall upon conviction be fined for every such offence in any sum not more than one hundred dollars, &c."

As the husband is liable for the acts of his wife, he has to pay the moderate sum of one hundred dollars for the inestimable privilege of wearing Horns.

Should this law be strictly enforced we may calculate on having seminaries in every township in the state.

Quere. Has the governor or any member of the legislature yet contributed their mite for the encouragement of seminaries.

FROM THE NEW-YORK GAZETTE, AUGUST 11.

NEWS.—We learn by the schooner Adventure, from Aux Cays, that Christophe with 16,000 men, was on his march for the lines near Port-au-Prince; no doubt for the express purpose of drawing Petion's forces from the Coffee plantations, as they were engaged in the crops. Petion was irritated, but had assembled with a force sufficient to check any inroads which might be attempted by the enemy.

Prince JOHN, Grand Admiral of Hayti, died at the Cape on the 4th of July, aged 36 years, of a consumption. His body was kept above ground 19 days, and was then carried to St. Lucie, where it was interred with great solemnity.

LONDON, June 18---The interest excited by the trials for high treason, has been rarely equalled. It was not confined to the metropolis, but spread through every part of the United Kingdom. We have felt it our duty upon this occasion to make extraordinary exertions for the gratification of our readers. We have now to express our hope that these exertions have not altogether failed. The Traveller of yesterday presented a circumstance unexampled in the annals of Evening Newspapers---a journal printed on the largest paper allowed to be used, and containing 40 columns of which thirty three were appropriated to the trial of Mr. Watson.

EGYPT.—"At Cairo they have experienced a circumstance not remembered by the oldest Egyptian—four days of excessive torrents of rain, which had nearly destroyed whole villages. The houses having been built of unbaked clay, scarcely a dwelling escaped without injury, and had the rain continued a few days longer, all the city of Cairo itself, must inevitably have been washed away.
